NAVY EMPLOYE DISMISSED.

WASHINGTON ,D. C., October 27 .-Secretary Bonaparte has dismissed an employe of the Norfolk navy for refusing to carry out the terms of a lease with a machinist's mate because it would be necessary for the latter to come to his residence dressed in the uniform of a petty officer of the United States navy.

The employe said that neither he nor his wife had any objection to the uniform, but owing to the prejudice which existed in the town of Berkeley against sailors he felt it due to his family, in order to maintain their position in the town, that he should refuse to allow a sallor to reside in his house. The Secretary said: "The department has always done everything it reasonably could to protect the service against any form of affront or indignity on the part of those members of the community who are so lacking in patriotism and good sense as to consider the uniform a reason for social discrimination against

Some of these natives appeared before the commission. The report points out that the mutilation of their bodies is an ancient custom of the natives, and that all cases of mutilation presented were attributable to natives. The commission, therefore, concluded that there was no testimony showing that the whites had been guilty of mutilations. As these various abuses were chiefly
